BIG BRITISH FLEET OFF
U. S. COAST?QUADRON OF FOREIGN CRUISERS AND DESTROYERS SIGHTED
BY RUSSIAN SHIP
CAPTAIN.PATROL ESTABLISHEDAmerican Destroyers Will Keep Close Surveillance Over Atlantic Waters.—Liner Bovic Sees
Submarine.(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Boston, Oct. 13.—A fleet of foreign cruisers and destroyers is off the American coast, according to Captain Rinderoos of the Russian steamer Esperus, which arrived here today from Huelva, Spain. To the pilot who boarded his vessel Captain Rinderoos reported that a "lot of cruisers and destroyers" passed his vessel off Cape Sabie Wednesday, heading southwest. At the rate of speed they were traveling, he said, they must be off the coast by now. The Esperus' captain had not heard of the German submarine raid Sunday, as there is no wireless equipment on his ship.

Are British Destroyers?

Belief that they were British destroyers was held by many water-front authorities who connected their appearance with the fact that it was only yesterday that British vessels of this port moved out after being held here since the submarine raid of Nantucket Sunday. The British destroyers, they contended, came here to act as convoy to ships of that nationality.

Three British steamers went out last night and today the Lord Cromer, and the Marconi, prepared to sail. The Kansan of the American-Hawaiian line, under charter to the France and St. Lawrence company, and laden with war munitions and horses for the allies, also was expected to sail today for St. Nazaire, France and Genoa.

The Kansan was the first steamship to encounter the raid last Sunday, but was allowed to proceed after an English Coast Patrol established.

Newport, R. I., Oct. 13.—A far-flung patrol by torpedo boat destroyers charged with the double duty of enforcing neutrality observance, and saving lives in event of further submarine raids on shipping off the New England shore was put into effect from Bar Harbor to New York today. Official authority for the statement has such a patrol been ordered by the navy department, was obtained here today.

The limits of the line of coast surveillance at present effective, is shown today with the arrival of the destroyers Spanish, of Bar Harbor, Maine, and the activity of the destroyer Sterrett in New York harbor. Between these two outposts, nine other destroyers were weaving a net of observation that extended a considerable distance out to sea, well beyond the lines of coastwise vessels.

Except in war emergencies, the coast was not to be entered by naval forces in such numbers for years.

Liner Sights Submarine.

Confirmation that the British steamer Bovic sighted a submarine off the coast, was contained in a statement by a naval official here today. He said:

"A passenger steamer reported to Nantucket she sighted a submarine well up the morning."

No position was given nor was the direction of the submarine stated.

Make Survey of Coast.

Washington, Oct. 13.—Admiral Mayo, commanding the Atlantic fleet, notified the navy department to the fact that he had ordered a survey of the New England coast to investigate reports that certain ships had established a base there or that wireless plants were being operated in violation of American neutrality.

Destroyers Patrol Coast.

New York, Oct. 13.—A dozen destroyers of the United States navy are now patrolling the ocean highways to and from North Atlantic ports today. It was reported that American waters, from the British Isles to the Arctic, were being patrolled by naval forces.

Rear Admiral Albert Gleaves, commander of the torpedo flotilla at the port, and Rear Admiral Austin M. Knight, commanding the naval station at Narragansett Bay, said no official action toward establishing such a patrol had been taken. He admitted, however, this soon would be done. The seaward dash of eleven destroyers from Newport, yesterday, aroused much alarm. At least one United States destroyer is known to have gone on guard outside New York since last Sunday.Rear Admiral Albert Gleaves, commander of the torpedo flotilla at the port, said the sending of the destroyers, seen and in connection with the sailing of the White Star liner Adriatic from New York for Liverpool yesterday.

Since the appearance of the German submarine off Nantucket the navy department has shut down all coast wireless stations.

Delay Deporting Aliens.

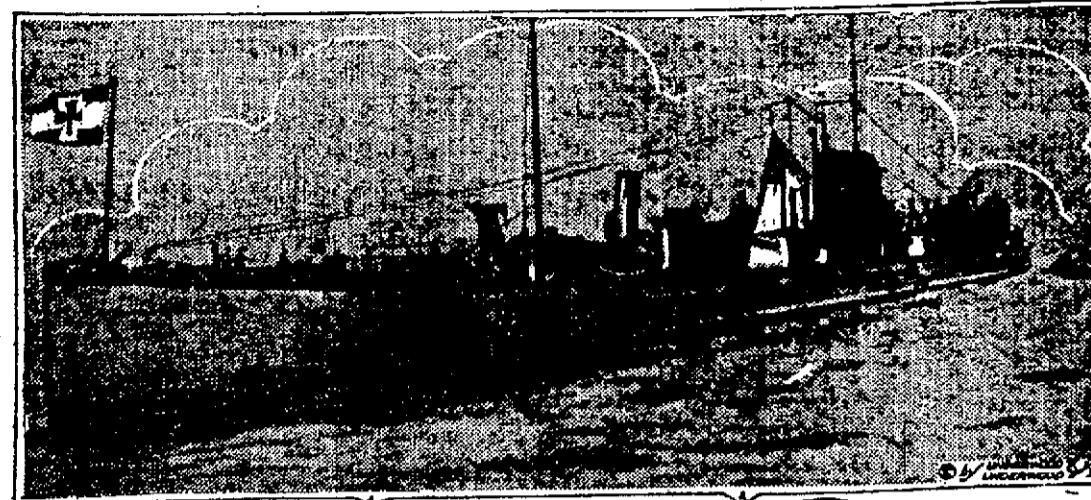

The deportation of aliens from New York and Boston has been suspended by the bureau of immigration, until the submarine peril is passed. About 200 foreigners, half of them Germans, are awaiting deportation.

The British steamer Madras, which was overhauled by the United States destroyer Sterrett and brought back to New York harbor last night, when she attempted to pass out for Staten Island, ignoring the Sterrett's order to stop, is expected to sail again today.

May Use Canadian Ports.

St. John's, New Brunswick, Oct. 13.—The use of Canadian ports as terminals of steamships in trans-Atlantic trade to avoid difficulties arising from submarine raids such as that of Sunday was urged in resolution adopted by the executive branch of the board of trade today. It was ordered sent to the government at Ottawa.

The resolution points out that such selection of trade from United States ports would obviate complications, because trade with Canadian ports is protected by the British navy and any submarine menace would be dealt with directly and more effectively than the support of all ports of trade in Canada is requested to that end.

U-BOAT THAT TERRORIZES SHIPPING; OFFICERS IN COMMAND

U-53. Bottom, left to right: American naval officer, Capt. Hans Rose and Lieuts. Stein and Molier of U-53.

Here is the vessel and here are the officers who have brought terror to shipping circles on this side of the Atlantic. The U-53 is believed to be but one of a whole fleet of super-submarines which will prey on allied ships.

Excerpts From Beveridge's Speeches To Union Men In West

At Butte, Montana, former Senator Albert J. Beveridge said in part:

"Labor's cause has been my cause all my life, and I speak to you laboring men of Butte as one who has earned the right to be called a friend. Let us counsel together as to the effect upon organized labor of the ten-hour pay-for-eight-hour-day law.

"The manner in which that law was passed struck organized labor the heaviest. When we received, because in the eyes of the people it sets organized labor against the principle of all orderly government. The president, with the threat of nation-wide strike as a club, forced congress to enact the demands of the railroads and brotherhoods to amounts to anything it may be the result of a study of the facts; but in this case there was no time to study facts, and no facts at hand to study, if there had been time.

"The fact that this law was obtained by force has antagonized all the people's sense of fairness. Many

BROODS OVER DEATH OF WIFE: KILLS SELF

FRED H. MILLER, CLINTON, CLERK FOR TWO NIGHTS AT HOTEL LONDON, SHOOTS SELF IN ROOM LAST NIGHT.

SEE NO OTHER CAUSE

Sold Barber Shop and Billiard Hall a Month Ago and Was Known Not to be in Financial Straits.

Mentally depressed and constantly brooding since the death of his wife in March, which is thought to have placed his mind in a despondent condition, Fred H. Miller, formerly of Clinton, ended his life in the London Hotel at the corner of East Milwaukee and South Bluff streets some time about six o'clock last night. Miller shot himself in the right temple with a new .32 calibre revolver and had also turned on the gas, presumably to cause asphyxiation had the bullet not served the purpose.

It is almost certain that the cause for the act lies in the death of Mrs. Miller, who was formerly Nellie Decker, the only daughter of John Decker, Milton avenue. Since her death at Clinton he had constantly evidenced signs of despondency. Previous to the wife's death she had been ill for a long period and even during this time Miller was known to have worried constantly. Her death broke him in spirit.

MAY CHOOSE LAWYER FOR CITY JOB TODAY

Commissioners This Afternoon Expected to Reach Decision as to New City Attorney.

From what Mayor James A. Fathers stated this morning it appears that Janeville will have an acting city attorney until the time the city commission is scheduled to have a meeting this afternoon, with the matter of the selection of a legal adviser for the municipality as the most important matter to come to its attention.

Who the attorney will be has not been disclosed to the commissioners individually during the morning. Neither Mayor Fathers nor Commissioner Peter J. Goodman would admit that they at that time had decided definitely for the position. Both the mayor and commissioner stated that no conference had been held relative to talking over candidates for the job.

A number of attorneys desire the place. Some have placed their desires before the commissioners in person, while others have sought aid through the medium of friends who were also regarded as "being close" to the commission members themselves.

The calendar court jury for the term will be summoned for Tuesday, Dec. 5, at two o'clock in the afternoon. The calendar of cases for trial at this term of the court is expected to be ready for distribution tomorrow.

COST OF PAPER LEADS TO SEARCH FOR WOOD

Owing to the growing scarcity in Wisconsin of wood suitable for making paper pulp, the forest products laboratory at Madison has engaged the services of a noted authority on wood to advise him on the best woods to use. The laboratory tests show that certain western woods are admirably adapted for the manufacture into pulp, and negotiations are now under way between paper companies and a committee of western lumbermen with a view to securing freight rates on trainload shipments of chips to Wisconsin. It is estimated that some of these western woods can be cut into chips, which, when dried and baled, can be delivered to the mills in Wisconsin at a very small advance over the cost of chips made from local timber. Since there is a market for more than 300,000 cords of wood annually in Wisconsin, an attempt to utilize western species appears worthy of consideration in order to hold the supply of wood for our American paper mills on American soil.

After this time Miller held various positions, but on each occasion only held them short while. He was disconsolate always. He took the London Legion of night classes at the Hotel London three days ago and had worked two nights. Late he could not sleep. Discover Body.

He spent the greater share of his time in the hotel lobby and in walking about. Yesterday afternoon he came from his room about 6 o'clock and placed his coat in his coat closet and returned to lie down until it was time to report for duty.

Day Clerk Smith went to Miller's room about 6:15 o'clock to call him. The door was locked and no response came to his rapping. Inserting a master key in the lock he pushed back the key Miller had used to secure the door and opened it. The man lay on the floor dead.

Dr. W. H. McGuire was summoned and after an examination said that Miller had been dead about three-quarters of an hour. Coroner D. Frank Ryan was called. In his belief, from information available at that time and today, the act was done in a fit of depression. Miller is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Miller, five sisters, Mrs. Katie Shoever and Miss Bell Miller of Elberton, and Mrs. Walter Freis and Miss Bessie Miller of Clinton, and two brothers, W. E. and George Miller of Clinton. He was thirty-four years of age and was born at Clinton, July 23, 1882.

The funeral will be held at the home of J. A. Decker on Milton avenue, at one o'clock Saturday. Interment will be at Oak Hill cemetery.

FAIL TO LEARN.

Evidently the war department has learned no real lesson since it comes to the question of the care of the volunteer army that they see fit to call into existence from time to time. Some hundred odd thousand young men, in the prime of life, were rushed to the Mexican border early in the summer with the hope that comes to every adventurous American, of actual fighting in defense of the Stars and Stripes.

Many gave up lucrative positions, many were in line for promotion, and now few left families dependent upon them to answer the call of the president and the governors of the various states as members of the national guard units. Held for months upon the southern border, marched beneath broiling suns and sleeping in tents was not half as much hardship as one would expect, but the thought that their time was wasted, that they were not needed, that they were part of a giant political trick, not even amenable to the eight hour law, gnawed upon them and it is no wonder they have become discontented.

Then came the demand for enrollment of recruits to fill up the vacant ranks. It was slow and the nation wondered. Did they expect that with no war pending, no war possible, under the watchful waiting, back to the enemy, policy of the administration there was any incentive to become a volunteer soldier? The few contingents that have come back have been brought home in thin clothing, with scanty rations, on trains with few accommodations and, if mustered out at their state camps, forced to pay their fares to their homes out of their own pockets.

It harks back to the days of the Civil war when Wisconsin soldiers were mustered out in Tennessee and Georgia, and even further away, and go home as best they could. The absolutely unpreparedness of the majority of the state guard units for the present call for service demonstrates that the government has learned nothing by the lesson of the Spanish-American war, and while the sanitary conditions, the food and clothing may have been of better type, still the fact remains this nation is in a state of absolute unpreparedness for any warlike contingency that might arise, not only from a point of equipment, but from a standard of men big enough to handle problems of moving, equipping and handling a large force of volunteers.

It took two years to train the legions of the recruits of the Sixties into seasoned soldiers and it would take even longer than that now to mobilize, enlist, draft if you please, drill, equip, furnish with arms and ammunition, an army of the size that either the North or the South called into the field. This is not the day of the Minnesota Men of Seventy-five, but a modern day question and one that this nation must meet and settle without delay.

STATE AFFAIRS.

Interest in the national campaign somewhat overshadows the usual battle between the dominant parties for control of the state offices and legislature. Indications, however, point to a good sized working majority of republicans in the Nineteen Seventeen legislature with Phillip re-elected by a good majority. The real invasion of Wisconsin by the speakers of national reputation in behalf of the republican state and national ticket has not yet been placed fairly in action, but there is promise that the last two weeks of the month will witness unusual activities all along the line.

The democrats are not missing any opportunity to place their claims before the voters of the state, and candidate Williams for the gubernatorial honors and Wolfe for the senatorial seat, have toured the state most thoroughly, combing the various districts for any stray votes they might pick up. Williams' free discussion of state affairs leads one to believe that his campaign was mapped out by some of Phillip's enemies in his own party as it follows so closely the lines of attack previously combatited.

Wolfe, on the other hand, takes the bull by the horns, extolls Wilson, discusses national issues freely and is apparently making many friends even among his political enemies by the earnest manner in which he handles questions fearlessly and not with the usual reference to the particular kind of audience he is talking to. Wolfe is no trimmer and he does not mince matters as to his brand of democracy in the least.

Meanwhile Phillip finds time between handling state affairs, to make some telling addresses in which he illustrates what has been accomplished and what he hopes to accomplish if re-elected and given a good legislature in harmony with his economical ideas of government. The taxpayers like his talk and listen with interest to what he says, and it is safe to say they will vote for him in November on his past record.

"DOLLAR DIPLOMACY"*BLUNDERS

There was a fine, ringing sound in the contemptuous phrase "dollar diplomacy," and the democratic party made the most of it in 1912. Its platform was against dollar diplomacy, whatever it might mean. It was made to mean, for campaign purposes only, the supposed purpose of evil malefactors to use the United States naval, military and diplomatic powers to secure and insure profitable grafts for American investors in minor countries.

It was an easy thing to denounce, granting the privilege of making this definition. The fact that nothing of the sort had been attempted or proposed was immaterial. The treaty with Honduras served as a fine example for Mr. Bryan and his kind. It had been negotiated under a republican administration and was pending when the Wilson-Bryan regime took charge of foreign relations. Then Mr. Bryan stopped, urged, and at length secured ratification of this treaty! It was a wicked treaty when negotiated by republicans; a humanitarian service when democrats, suddenly under the disconcerting burden of responsibility, became its advocates.

The fiscal pact between this country and Santo Domingo, sustained itself by force of arms, and is still boasting that island by methods that had republicans ever employed them, would have been denounced as the last excesses of conscienceless conquerors.

In Nicaragua the Wilson administration took up the cause of Chamorro, a candidate for the presidency, and compelled his election by the cheerful process of telling the other candidates that the United States wouldn't permit them to run!

Chamorro had been Nicaraguan minister in Washington, was "solid" with the powers there, and was understood to be the Wilson candidate because he was pledged to defy certain findings of the Central American Court of Justice, established to settle differences among the five little countries of the Isthmian region.

The wreck of this court and the setting up of Chamorro, opposed by his people, means the definite introduction of American force as the backbone of governments in that troublesome area, the creation of puppet regimes that will keep the whole Caribbean region in a turmoil and our vast and vital Panama interests in constant danger.

For dollar diplomacy the Wilson regime has substituted battleship bullying. At least, we have saved an alteration out of the wreck of friendly relations with these helpless minor republics.

While there is no doubt that baseball is at present the all-absorbing topic still there are a few persons who still read articles on the political and war situations with interest. However, the next thing that comes will be football, and that is worse than war, politics or baseball to dope out.

It has been suggested that perhaps Governor Phillip might go a bit further in his statement of the fallacy of the democratic claims, but he has gone far enough as it is to show the inadvisability of changing administrative heads at the coming election.

Strange how two men can view the same situation so differently. Take a democrat for instance and he sees nothing but Wilson as the victor, and talk with a republican and he is confident of Hughes. Both are confident they are right and the other wrong.

First Chief Carranza intends to end bullfighting in Mexico as an illustration of his trend toward civilization. With plenty of sport left baiting Americans, the average Mexican will never miss his national sport.

Germany certainly has managed to stage its side of the war extremely well and at present time bids fair to Bismarckian Rumania, if the subjects of Alexander do not watch out for their interests most closely.

It has become the habit of the belligerent nations to blame poor Uncle Sam when anything goes wrong. Poor Samuel is to blame for at least half of the troubles of the world at present, evidently.

These German submarines are bad for the nerves of the allies and the democratic administration just at present. No sooner do they disappear in one locality than they bob up in another.

It is reported that eggs may go to unusual prices before Christmas. This simply goes to show that the currency of the hen is more inflated than our money standard by a good bit.

What is the trouble with Andy Carnegie when he lets Johnny Rockefeler monopolize the news columns the way he does? Is the "Laird of Skiboo" sick or simply in his dotage?

No one has heard of the old-fashioned Alton B. Parker and his style of campaign this year. Bryan has been in evidence but Parker appears to be forgotten.

Safety razors may take the place of carving knives in semi-fashionable families this winter if the prices of meat continue to rise above the present high level.

We certainly varied the monotony of life when she ate that apple out of curiosity, and else she wanted to see if Adam would buy her another on a rising market.

Strange how some men wish to be present when a desire for a fur overcoat would be much more easily satisfied with lots less trouble and expense.

An active program of improvements was outlined at the annual meeting of the congregation at Trinity church held last night following the Harvest Home supper given in the Guild room of the church.

Over one hundred people attended the meeting and the supper which was intended to get the people of the church together for a social evening as well as to settle the business of the church.

It was decided to carry out the plans suggested by the officers of the church as regards the improvement of church property. A hardwood floor is to be laid in the church, the interior to be kalsomined, the roof is to be extensively repaired, the new roof put on the rectory and the interior of the building repapered throughout.

The plan of having an "every member canvass" of the congregation was discussed. This plan is to have a few members visit every member of the congregation to solicit funds for the support of the church.

The election of officers for the coming year was also held. J. C. Fox was elected Senior Warden and James G. Gregory, Junior Warden. The eight vestrymen elected were: Harry E

"Lo, Mayme."
"Yes, think me."
"Surest thing you know, sweet heart."
"Oh yes I did; I called you up three times."
"I didn't take no other girl."

(Synopsis of preceding chapters: Amos Threads, champion heavy drinker of the Middle West, discovers one day that he is haunted by what appears to be a ball of fire, which appears contiguously in front of his forehead. Threads is a detective who is determined to follow wherever the mystic ball shall lead, firmly believing that it is beckoning him on to fortune. In his quest he follows the fiery globe through Andalucia, the Scropic Isles, Mangway Peninsula, across the Scin-gle range and in many other countries and continents of the world, by fortune still induced him. As the ball leads him past the home of the great detective, he gives way to a sudden impulse and steps into the great detective's receiving room and relates the tale of the red ball).

NEWS NOTES FROM MOVIELAND
by DAISY DEAN

Salome comes pretty near being the original vampire lady of history, matriarch Norma Talmadge. These modern sirens of the motion picture screen are tame creations compared to the tempestuous and passionate Princess of Judea.

"I have never played a mimic temptress of the film—but Salome has interested me. These colorless tigresskin ladies of modern days with women have so many interests and professions, I cannot comprehend, but the wayward daughter of Herodias has come down through the ages quite understandable. Indeed, with all her almost barbaric ways of the olden days, she is quite modern. She symbolizes the restlessness of the women of today. She had nothing to occupy her mind and morbid love crept into her thoughts instead. Jewels, cosmetics and masculinity were the only mental diversions of the day. Today, Salome would be president of a suffragette society, lecturing women from the first corner.

On she would be interested in settlement work. Poor girl! Salome was a victim of old-fashioned feminine limitations. And she would have made such a splendid suffrage leader!

The dramatists have never given the lustful Salome a chance. Sudermann, in "Johanna," made her a empress.

John the Baptist, because he met her advances with reproach. In the end, Sudermann concedes that Salome would have relented had the prophet been willing to ask her his life. She was piqued and when a modern girl is piqued she would like the guilty person's head, if she could get it. We're all Salomes if she could get the skin! *

MISS PICKFORD BEGINS NEW FEATURE.

Mary Pickford has finished her first independent production, "Less Than the Dust," and has begun on the second one. Maurice Tourneur will direct it while John Emerson who directed the first one cuts and assembles it for the first time, as it is going to be, in Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia. Miss Pickford intends to be present phonically. That is, she will talk over the telephone to these different cities and her messages will be received by important young ladies through receptionists for the first time, as it is going to be, in Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia. Miss Pickford promises she will wear a lace-trimmed gown that cost $1,000 (including the lace) in her forthcoming "Year of the Locusts."

Myrtle Stedman is acting with Sessee Hayakawa and Tsuri Oaki.

Norma Talmadge as "Salome".

Devers stationed near the screen. They will send greetings back.

Ruth Stonehouse is directing, writing and playing the lead in a series of one-reel orphan asylum pictures. The first is to be called "Mary Ann." Miss Stonehouse has written short stories for magazines. She used to be a member of the sob squad of a Chicago newspaper. Which is to say, she was a girl reporter.

Fannie Ward promises she will wear a lace-trimmed gown that cost $1,000 (including the lace) in her forthcoming "Year of the Locusts."

Virtues of Faithfulness

By REV. J. H. RALSTON
Secretary of Correspondence Department, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

TEXT.— Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the apostle and high priest of our confession, Christ Jesus; who was faithful to him that appointed him, as also Moses was faithful in all his house.—Heb. 3:1, 2.

Man may lack nearly all the virtues that are ordinarily prized, but if he retains just the virtue of faithfulness he cannot be overlooked. If he add to the other virtues that of faithfulness he at once goes to the front.

We may note that the faithfulness of Jesus Christ had something in view every moment—the commission of him who had appointed him. He had come to do the father's will and he never for a moment let that drop out of sight until he was ready to say, "I have finished the work that thou gavest me to do." Every man has his appointed work and ordinarily he knows what it is, but if he keeps that in view, especially if he keeps in view the one who gave him the appointment, he will not fail. Jesus Christ realized every moment that he was an apostle, that is a "sent one," and he carried out his work as the high priest for his people, viz.: to make a reconciliation of man to God, in short to make their redemption complete.

This faithfulness of Jesus Christ was compared with the faithfulness of Moses who was declared to be "faithful in all his house." Nothing omitted as far as human scrutiny could go. But the faithfulness of Jesus Christ was greater—not so much in the quality of it—but in that he was faithful as the son over his own house, whose house we are. Here, as in other qualities of the high priest, Jesus was better than man or the best of men.

It is in this faithfulness of Jesus Christ that the believer has the guarantee of his ultimate salvation. While man must not forget that he must hold fast to the "confidence and rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end," yet emphasis must always be placed on the fidelity of the Redeemer. Paul was confident that he had begun good work in him would perform it, or perfect it, until the day of Jesus Christ. To him Jesus was looked upon as taking hold of a man and guaranteeing his salvation. It is not presumption to look upon Jesus as undertaking the redemption of a man and believing that he will complete the work. It is very rarely that you find a Christian man or woman who is instrumental in bringing a man to the Lord who is thus faithful, and the believer might from two standpoints do well to think of Jesus as faithful to him. Sometimes when he is in the way of temptation and Jesus is having a hard time to hold him; sometimes when a man is really doing his best with tremendous opposition, Jesus is near at hand keeping him from falling.

This faithfulness of Jesus is something in which we may all share. As we look upon men we find many of them possessing the talents that we do not possess. They have splendid physiques, fine personalities, good voices, high intellectual attainments, sanctity and many other qualities, and as we look at ourselves we find ourselves to be utterly lacking, and such as we have are very inferior, and so we despair of making a mark in connection with them.

There is another thing about the faithfulness of Jesus that completes our confidence; his faithfulness is coupled with transcendent ability. Paul again comes to us and says: "For I know in whom I have believed, and I am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." There was a day when Paul committed his eternal salvation to Jesus Christ. He left it all in the hands of Jesus; he trusted him as faithful. At that time Paul did not know much about the ability of Jesus, but now, near the end of his life, after the lapse indeed of many years, we know that he has tested Jesus and his testimony is that not only was he faithful but that he was able. We cannot doubt but that Paul had many hard battles, and as he was passing through some of them it would seem that he must fail, but just as he was going down Jesus held out his strong hand and delivered him. "That day" was not far distant to Paul although it has not arrived yet, but Paul knew that his eternal interests were safe in Jesus because he had tested him for so long. Paul knew that God was rich in glory and could supply all his needs, as he wrote to the Philippians.

To every man that has a serious thought about the salvation of his own soul Jesus Christ is presented as a mediator between God and man, in the position of the high priest, and he has three qualities that are absolutely necessary to the completion of that work. First, he has the ability to do it; secondly, he has the willingness to do it; thirdly, he has the faithfulness to do it.

THE APPEAL TO CAESAR.

There were Parliaments of Religions long before our late day, although not called by that somewhat high-sounding name and lacking in the bargain-counter aspect which has seemed to characterize some of them. They were not given over to the reading of labored and rhetorical papers, but in most instances were unconscious exhibitions of the real spirit of the several faiths in their actual struggle for ascendancy, the very life of some advocate being the stake. * * * One such congress of religious systems was held in Festus' judgment hall, where Roman, Jewish and Christian faiths of that day contended over the person of St. Paul and in doing so unwittingly showed the essential character of each. It is as if the moving picture camera had preserved the scene and the phonograph the very voices for our day two thousand years after. * * * It was a triangular antagonism. The Roman faith has its representative in Festus, nobler than Felix, but yet showing the inveterate obuseness of the heathen mind in matters spiritual. At this time he commands respect for his characteristic Roman insistence that accusers shall meet accused face to face and his regard for the personal safety of his prisoner. He would take no risk in the transfer of Paul from one place to another, although he probably had no definite knowledge of the plot. Promptness was another trait of Festus. He brooked no delay. The day after his arrival in Caesarea he mounted his judgment-seat and summoned Paul and his accusers before him. * * * The next angle to the Roman, which Festus occupied, was held by the representatives of the Hebrew church and faith, a vociferating, passionate set, repulsive in the extreme, charging many things, none of which they were able to prove. Admittedly ugly in look of face and tone of voice they certainly are, but no worse than religious persecutors of other ages and lands. * * * At the last angle stands the apostle, admirable from every point of view, self-possessed, knowing his rights under the law, determined to maintain them, denying all charges point-blank and demanding evidence. When at length a change of venue is proposed, he believes himself to be safer before the Emperor in Rome than before the high-priest in Jerusalem, and appeals to the former: "There is no rashness in Paul's decision, much less ill-temper. He avails himself of his highest right as a Roman citizen. With dignity and full consciousness of the serious and irrevocable consequences of his act he cries, 'I will stand at Caesar's judgment-seat and nowhere else'. Festus himself knows I have done no wrong to the Jews!" The consciousness of his innocence shines clear. If he had committed a crime he would gladly pay the penalty. But if it was proposed by the present court to turn him over to those who were so blinded by prejudice that it was impossible for them to deal justly in his case, he knew his rights as a Roman and that it was only necessary for him to speak one word to block all proceedings and that word, brief and freighted with great meaning, he now deliberately utters, "I appeal unto Caesar!" The Procurator now had no recourse. The case at that instant is beyond his jurisdiction. All that remains is for him to put his vision on the appeal and this he does in the form: "Hast thou appealed unto Caesar? Unto Caesar shalt thou go!"

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN.

"To declare oneself a Roman citizen untruly was a high crime punishable with death. Such was the great value placed on its possession. * * * To announce oneself a citizen of Rome, as Cicero declared, was instantly to safeguard his person and property in any quarter of the world, for the entire power of the empire was considered pledged to maintain and protect that right. * * * Paul had before asserted his Roman citizenship. Once in Philippi, when the magistrates sent the sergeants to inform him that he was free, he stood upon his rights, saying, 'They have beaten us openly uncondemned, being Romans and now want to thrust us out secretly. Never! Let them come in person!' In this instance the magistrates were quickly at the door entreating the prisoners to walk out of the keep. This was no puncticio or petty pique. It was a dignified maintaining of a civil right and an act which would incidentally lead to the treating of Paul's gospel and his converts with more consideration. * * * Later, in Jerusalem, at the time of his arrest, he had only to say to the officer who was ordered by his superior to examine the prisoner by scourging, 'Is it lawful for you to scourge a Roman citizen before you convict him?' and the process was instantly halted. Modern nations well may imitate ancient Rome in making the lives and property of their citizens inviolable on land and sea. * * * No civic right should be treated as an immaterial matter or relinquished without efforts to maintain it or protest against its invasion. * * * A Roman magistrate in Palestine had a hard row to hoe. The Empire on the one hand demanded that affairs be conducted efficiently and at the same time that tumults be avoided. On the other hand was an inflammatory populace galling under loss of national independence. The whole situation was further complicated by burning religious sentiments precluding deepest convictions. It was a case where in things immaterial a civil officer needed to be pliant as willow, in things important and essential, sturdy as oak. * * * Festus, in being willing to do the Jews' a pleasure only wished to placate them and avoid a tumult which at any time might reach the proportions of a fanatical insurrection and in any case might be reported at Rome to the disadvantage of his administration. He would not however have knowingly put the life of his prisoner in jeopardy.

BACKFIELD CHANGES NECESSARY AT U. W.

Berg May Not Return to School—Kreuz Still Out—Gardner's Return Strengthens Forward Wall.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 13.—Rain and a mud field had no effect on Dr. Withington yesterday afternoon as he sent his gridiron men through their regular drill at Camp Randall, and he did not allow his men to loaf. With the South Dakota State game come one day off, the regular coach has but little time in which to prepare.

In addition to the inclement weather conditions Dr. Withington is facing the problem of unearthing a new fullback. Berg, who has been drilled for the place all season, has been called home to attend the funeral of his father, who died in Waupun yesterday, and rumors are current that he will not return to school. Berg was one of the hardest line buckers on the squad and was expected to perform well in the games this year.

Stark has been playing at full since Berg left the squad because Kreuz, a veteran of two years, is on the hospital list and cannot get into the game for at least two weeks. Oisness may half-shift to fullback and Ether to half-back, according to news from Withington, as far as news from Berg as to whether he will return to school before making any changes.

Stark has had little varsity experience, but will have plenty of chance to gain knowledge in the two pre-season games yet to be played.

The line was considerably strengthened by the return of Gardner, who had been under the faculty until a few days ago. Captain Meyers and Crane have not returned to the scrumline, while Kieckhefer is still unable to appear. Hancock has been replaced at tackle by Graper, who showed class in the Lawrence game. South Dakota, according to the sports, has been strengthened by the arrival of veterans who have been on the border with the national guards. With their return and judging from the showing against Minnesota, the wearers of the cardinal will have their hands full to win from the westerners.

President Haughton is not going to desert the Braves. Neither are the Braves going to desert President Haughton. Rumors of changes in Braves ownership and presidency and directorship flew thick and fast recently. It was said the famous Harvard coach was to retire from big league management. It was said

Maurice Starnes was to become coach of the Braves. It was said

Scott Fred Mitchell was to become manager of the Braves. But President Percy denies he is to retire.

Manager George declares he will re-

Hazelnuts vs. Hickorynuts. The Filberts threw the hook into the Walnuts at Millers last night, winning two of the three contests rolled. The fastest break in the game was between the Walnuts and Hazelnuts while the Filberts' two wins made a three-cornered tie for seventh place. "Lady" Catlin was the only one at the party who contributed a dime. He touched 100 in the last frame.

Either the Hickory Nuts will have taken a substantially good hold on the race or the Filberts are Hickory nuts will be fast on the heels of the leaders after their scheduled games are finished. To go into the lead the Hazelnuts will have to take three straight. Figuring it out a la Hughie Fullerton: "They can't do it," sez Emmett Hoyland.

Denning's West Side Carpenter bowlers defeated an aggregation of multi-drivers by 131 pins at the West Side Alleys last night. ### LEVIS AND OLSEN LEAD VARSITY FIVE

First Time in History That Badger Quintet Had Two Captains, One Each Semester.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 13.—George Lewis and Harold Olsen have been elected captains of the University of Wisconsin basketball team for the first and second semesters respectively this year. Never before have two men been chosen to lead the team during one season, but it is necessary this year because of the fact that Lewis will graduate in February. When he leaves Olsen will take his place as leader of the squad. Lewis has played two years and a semester on the team while Olsen has worked at guard for two seasons.

Dr. Meanwell has already started practice and hopes to repeat his work of previous years in winning conference championships. The veterans returning are Lewis, Olsen, Carlson, Meyers, McIntosh and Simpson. Bill Chandler has been declared ineligible and will not be able to compete until the second semester.

MORRIS MILLER

The Buffalo Bisons, champions of the International league, capitalized their reputation by arranging a short barnstorming trip. They took in something like $1,500 in their games. Besides that several of the players filled individual engagements with independent teams and put them into the general fund, so that Pat Donovan's team had quite a bit of money to divide.

In the mass of dope concerning Walter Holke, the new first baseman of the Giants, it is being printed that he signed a contract to play with the Reds for 1918 and would have been with the outlaws had they not gone out of business. The statement is not true. John Ganzel signed several Federal league players, but he failed to influence Holke, who was not, by the way, on good terms with Ganzel when the season in the International closed in 1916.

Coach Lawson Robertson, in taking charge of the University of Pennsylvania cross country squad, sprang a new training plan on the candidates. The runners would jog

CAINVILLE CENTER

Cainville Center, Oct. 12.—The first concert given by the Iris Concert company was a decided success.

Miss Louise Beaman especially pleased her large audience with her fine contralto voice, and she was forced to respond to numerous encores. The readings of Miss Laura Magill were also a most pleasing manner. Her ability of interpreting her various selections was quite remarkable and her hearers were able to follow her with the keenest appreciation. Much praise is due to the pianist, Miss Lorela Schmidt, whose solos did much to make the recital a success. All present voiced the sentiment that the entertainment was first class.

Miss Jenny Hopkins returned to her home in Milwaukee Monday.

Miss Olive Fenn returned home Saturday from Iowa, where she visited her sister. While there she attended the funeral of Jim Emmons. Mr. Emmons was former resident of Cainville.

The next Helpers' Union will be held next Thursday with Mrs. William Levy.

A large delegation from here went to Monroe Tuesday to the cheesemakers' picnic.

GOVERNMENT REPORT

ANALYZES NATION'S
LIVESTOCK MARKETS
CONVENE AT WAUSAU

Majority of Stock Is Disposed of at Big Central Markets.—Farmer Gets 55 to 65 Per Cent of Gross Returns.

Special to THE GAZETTE
Wausau, Wis., Oct. 13.—"Spare the land and spoil the soil," was one of the subjects prominently discussed at the fourth annual session of the Central Wisconsin Teachers' Association in the country as a whole has been found by specialists of the United States department of agriculture.
A survey of the live stock marketing conditions of the country. The data obtained by the survey have been published in Part V of a report of an exhaustive study of the meat situation in the United States.

The three general methods of marketing found to be in most common use are:

Shipping to the large centralized markets, selling to local butchers and packers, and the sale of farm-prepared meat to dealers or consumers. The bulk of the animals from the central states, it was found, are sold through the centralized markets, while some form of local marketing predominates in the extreme eastern, western and southern portions.

The total annual market handle consists of the sheep and lambs, two-thirds of the hogs, and approximately one-half of the beef cattle. For local slaughter about one-third of the beef cattle, one-quarter of the sheep and lambs, and one-half of the hogs are sold. Nearly one-third of the hogs and about one-sixth of the beef cattle and one-eighth of the sheep and lambs are slaughtered on farms and ranches. Relatively more sheep are shipped in earthen lots by owners than any other class of live stock. Cattle, hogs and calves follow in the order named, calves last in the order named, with calves, cattle and hogs following in order.

The study discloses that the time of butchering stockers and feeders is restricted to generally a few months of the year. Should stock-feeding operations be better adapted to market conditions, a decided influence toward a more even distribution of the supply would be the result.

Cooperative associations of cattle-raisers are becoming an important factor in marketing, the report shows.
Seven hundred and fifty organizations which market cattle in a cooperative way now exist in different states. Four hundred and thirty of these organizations are members of the live stock shipping associations. The greatest activity of this sort was found in Minnesota, where 215 cooperative live stock shipping associations are located. The department specialists also find that these associations bring greater returns to the farmer because of the reduction of marketing expenses and the realization of the prevailing prices at the centralized markets, and that they are also valuable because of their educational features.

Stockyards and Packing

Establishments

The systematized live stock marketing in the United States is the largest single factor in the marketing of meat animals. It is noteworthy that this system is peculiar to the United States; no other country having developed such markets for live stock. Not only are the stockyards the chief centers of the centralized marketing, but a large proportion of stock and other cattle also passes through these market centers.

The chief outlet for food producing animals in this country, the study shows, is wholesale slaughter and meat packing. Such industries usually are associated with centralized markets. More than 1,200 abattoirs and meat packing establishments were operating in the United States in 1914 and turned out products worth $11,517,563,423. The specialists report that one of the striking features of the industry is the concentration of ownership. Packing establishments buy cattle from the producers in a number of states and incidentally in a number of countries.

This practice, which in the opinion of the specialists, will continue to be important in these parts of the country remote from centralized markets, is most characteristic of the western group of states in general, and particularly in Colorado, Wyoming and Montana. In the central group of states, however, the marketmen and packers as to the effects of this practice in sections supplied with central markets on the general market prices of live stock and on the prosperity of cattle raisers.

Municipally owned or controlled abattoirs are becoming increasingly numerous in the more industrialized parts of the country, the report shows, and are decreasing rapidly the old type of public abattoir. Public abattoirs have been established in 22 cities and 13 states. Local conditions should determine whether or not a city should build its own abattoir, and a thorough examination of conditions, the study says, should be made before definite action is taken.

Great variations were found in existing laws of and damage of live stock in transit on different railroads.
On one road the claims paid amounted to 12 per cent of the revenue during a certain period, and on another to less than one per cent. The total claims for all roads in 1914 amounted to $1,191,190, on 27 railroads, were $1,245,477.51. The average rates on live stock for the years 1911 to 1913 were found to be 10 cents per hundred pounds for eastern or central territory, 11.9 cents for southern territory, and 14.9 cents for the western territories.

The difference between average live stock market prices over ten yearly long periods is closer than is generally understood. When the prices of live stock rises or falls, meat prices tend to change in the same direction, but the meat prices are not subject to abrupt daily fluctuations, which are one of the most adverse features of live stock market conditions.

Market Returns.

In order to secure information as to the relative cost of the different factors or steps in the processes of marketing animals and the proportions of the final price received by the farmer and marketman in the transactions, the specialists traced several thousand head of beef cattle from producer to consumer, both through centralized markets and where the animals were disposed of locally. In the former case the farmer's share of the gross returns ranged from .51 per cent to 85 per cent, while from 2 per cent to 5 per cent was paid market expenses, 2 per cent to 10 per cent was received by the packers, and 8 per cent to 33 per cent by the retailers. In the local sales, from 82 per cent to 84 per cent of the gross returns was received by the farmer and from 13 per cent to 38 per cent by the retailer. The detailed figures indicate, however, that even when the market is taken as a whole the lower grade stock is sold fairly well, the returns from such sales not being great relatively as those from sales through centralized markets.

RESCINDED BY-LAWS;
NAME NEW OFFICERS

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 13.—A motion passed in Marshfield a year ago, accepting a set of by-laws which had not been submitted to the individual chapters, was rescinded Thursday afternoon by Wisconsin Daughters of the American Revolution. A controversy over the by-laws, which was settled not with an exchange of icy remarks much shrugging of shoulders and wagging of heads.

Then the administration "railroaded" the by-laws through at the 1915 conference without giving the large percentage of the members a chance to see them, according to instructions supposed to have been given out by President General Mrs. William Cummings Story, who was in charge of the Teaching of Chaucer and King Henry VI to Ye Patriot Who Knows Nothing of Either, But Who Wants A Preachable Resort.

WILL MAIL BY-LAWS.
As a result of Thursday's action, the committee which drew up the by-laws presented them out to every chapter in the state. Then they will be ratified at the 1916 conference. The committee is composed of Mrs. R. B.
Hartmann, regent of Milwaukee chapter, and vice regent of the state, chairman and Mrs. E. B. Cole, Fond du Lac;

TAXI-DRIVER'S WIDOW
GETS COMPENSATION

Special to THE GAZETTE

Madison, Wis., Oct. 13.—Holding that there is a special hazard of assault in such employments as night watchman, game warden, bank cashier and others, the Industrial commission has awarded compensation to the widow of an Oshkosh taxi-driver who was murdered and robbed while on duty.

Early in the morning of July 4th last, George J. Bischoff, a taxi driver for the Bangs Rapid Transfer company of Oshkosh, was hired to drive stranger to the outskirts of the city.
Bischoff had been unusually busy during the night and had, relatively early in the morning of his person. At 5 o'clock in the morning his body was found sitting at the wheel of his taxi, the engine of which was still running. His right trouser's pocket was turned inside out and his money was gone. A bullet through the back of the head had caused death.

In addition to compensation to the widow, the commission says: "It was Bischoff's duty to go where he was directed, with friend, or stranger, and without inquiry. The duty and risk became correlative. Danger from assault was a hazard peculiar to the respondent's business, just as clearly as the exposed gears in a machine shop a hazard in their industry. The man who would bring him in contact with much danger, if injury results, has sustained an industrial accident."

As noted above, we think that the deceased came to his death by reason of personal injury accidentally sustained by him while performing services growing out of and incidental to his employment."

more glory in overcoming it.

MUNICIPAL UTILITY
SEEKS HIGHER RATE

Special to THE GAZETTE

Madison, Wis., Oct. 13.—The hearing here before the railroad commission in the case of the application of the village of Markesan for authority to increase the rates of its natural gas plant brought out the fact that the price of gasoline may cause a decided increase in the rates of all utilities that use this liquid in any considerable quantity.

E. W. Laper, secretary of the village board, testified that when the price went up about eight months ago, the rate for gas was increased from $1.50 per thousand feet, and the cost for street lights was increased from $100 per lamp per year to $125.

He admitted that this was in violation of the law.

of the utility law, which forbids any increase in rates without authority from the commission, but excused the action on the ground that it was thought that the commission would immediately grant the increase asked for.

Instead, however, the commission dismissed the application, because it could get no information from the village officials. A rehearing was asked for and granted.
Mr. Laper declared that at the rate of $1.25, the plant could not exist and said that at present they were paying 28 cents for gasoline delivered at Markesan.

"Do you think it essential that you be allowed a rate of $1.50?" asked Commissioner Trumbower of W. A.
Miller, president of the village board.
"Well," he replied, "it is as broad one way as it is the other. If our plant runs behind $2,500 a year, it would have to come out of the taxpayers anyway."

This is the second municipal utility to file application for an increase in rates because of the price of gasoline, the first being the village of South Wayne, which put in its application some time ago. It is expected that the commission will hand down a decision in the Markesan case within a few days.

SHOULD UNCLE SAM FINANCE
SETTLERS OF RECLAIMED LAND?

Special to THE GAZETTE

El Paso, Oct. 13.—Whether it is within the province of the national government to furnish funds for settlers on the unsettled lands of the United States will be one of the vital questions discussed when the International Irrigation congress meets here tomorrow. It has been held that if the Reclamation act of 1902, under the operation of which most of the reclamation work throughout the United States is being done, is to be made really effective something more must be done under its operation than the mere building of dams and the digging of ditches.

In the early days of the reclamation of arid lands by means of irrigation under direction of the United States Reclamation service, it was believed enough to build the dams, dig the ditches and provide the water.

It has since been found that this has not been enough to insure the success of the settler.

Too many of the settlers attracted to the reclaimed lands have failed through lack of capital. It is now believed that it is necessary not only to provide irrigation equipment but to finance the settler on irrigated lands until he can earn his living and pay for his land while it is being brought under cultivation.
